CBE celebrates official openings of middle schools and launch of career and technology centre

Calgary—The Calgary Board of Education is pleased to celebrate the official openings of four middle schools and the launch of its Career and Technology Centre (CTC) at Lord Shaughnessy High School over the next week.

The CBE is delighted to have new schools open in the communities where our students live. It is also proud to officially launch the CTC, a state-of-the-art facility designed to provide high school students with a wide range of industry recognized program options.

CBE Trustees, Alberta government officials, local MLAs, students, parents and community members will come together to officially celebrate the openings.

The middle schools are Captain Nichola Goddard School in Panorama Hills, Nose Creek School in Coventry Hills, Ted Harrison School in Taradale, and Twelve Mile Coulee School in Tuscany. The CTC at Lord Shaughnessy High School is in southwest Calgary.

The middle schools opened their doors to a total of 2,182 students last fall. The CBE's tradition is to celebrate the opening of new schools near the end of their inaugural year so that employees, students and communities can be involved.

Opening and launch ceremonies will take place as follows:
